DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

1. Claim 6 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 6 recites the limitation "said plurality of acoustic wave resonators" in line 1. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

- e) the invention was described in — (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for the purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language;

Art Unit: 2635

2. Claims 1-7,18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being clearly anticipated by Dinello (2004-0242486).

Dinello shows a tire sensor electronic assembly that includes a condition responsive device that senses the temperatures pressure of the tire, see paragraph 36. Also in paragraph 36, Dinello discusses the device being used to transmit information regarding other tire parameters including tread wear. An RF source (interpreted as either the transmitter 42 or the receiver antenna associated with the SAW 32) that is used to excite a SAW at resonant frequency levels to generate an output signal in response to the RF signal. Dinello includes an antenna 60 which is used to pass the generated signal and switching element (paragraph 34) associated with the battery to save power.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 8-14,19-30,32-39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Dinello as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of Breed (2004/0130442).

Art Unit: 2635

In an analogous art, Breed teaches wireless sensors on a vehicle that measure tire temperature pressure and report the data to a vehicle controller. Paragraph 385 discusses that each sensor can include it's own microprocessor and each device (sensor) would have an address such that it would respond only to information containing it's address. This would provide a cleaner communication system in that it would remove unsolicited communication. Additional such would provide increased battery saving in that a particular device need not transmit unnecessarily wasting power.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have used a microprocessor with each sensor of Dinello to make the sensors addressable as suggested by Breed.

4. Claims 15-17,31 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
